Dear Lederberg:

As you requested, I am sending you as many reprints of my Drosophila papers as are still available.

I agree with you that it would be interesting and important to have data on the location of genes in the salivary-gland chromosomes, but I doubt very much that at present anyone is interested in doing this tedious work. Muller's group is working on problems in which material for identification of genes should be available; and they might have new data on this problem.

With best regards,

Sincerely yours,
